

March 12, 2023

3rd Sunday of Lent

John 4:5-42 (The text in italics is omitted in the short form of the gospel.)

Jesus came to a town of Samaria called Sychar, near the plot of land that Jacob had given to his son Joseph. Jacob's well was there. Jesus, tired from his journey, sat down there at the well. It was about noon. A woman of Samaria came to draw water. Jesus said to her, "Give me a drink." His disciples had gone into the town to buy food. The Samaritan woman said to him, "How can you, a Jew, ask me, a Samaritan woman, for a drink?" (For Jews use nothing in common with Samaritans.) Jesus answered and said to her, "If you knew the gift of God and who is saying to you, 'Give me a drink,' you would have asked him and he would have given you living water." The woman said to him, "Sir, you do not even have a bucket and the cistern is deep; where then can you get this living water? Are you greater than our father Jacob, who gave us this cistern and drank from it himself with his children and his flocks?" Jesus answered and said to her, "Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again; but whoever drinks the water I shall give will never thirst; the water I shall give will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life." The woman said to him, "Sir, give me this water, so that I may not be thirsty or have to keep coming here to draw water."

Jesus said to her, "Go call your husband and come back." The woman answered and said to him, "I do not have a husband." Jesus answered her, "You are right in saying, 'I do not have a husband.' For you have had five husbands, and the one you have now is not your husband. What you have said is true." The woman said to him,

"Sir, I can see that you are a prophet. Our ancestors worshiped on this mountain; but you people say that the place to worship is in Jerusalem." Jesus said to her, "Believe me, woman, the hour is coming when you will worship the Father neither on this mountain nor in Jerusalem. You people worship what you do not understand; we worship what we understand, because salvation is from the Jews. But the hour is coming, and is now here, when true worshipers will worship the Father in Spirit and truth; and indeed, the Father seeks such people to worship him. God is Spirit, and those who worship him must worship in Spirit and truth." The woman said to him, "I know that the Messiah is coming, the one called the Christ; when he comes, he will tell us everything." Jesus said to her, "I am he, the one who is speaking with you."

At that moment his disciples returned, and were amazed that he was talking with a woman, but still no one said, "What are you looking for?" or "Why are you talking with her?" The woman left her water jar and went into the town and said to the people, "Come see a man who told me everything I have done. Could he possibly be the Messiah?" They went out of the town and came to him. Meanwhile, the disciples urged him, "Rabbi, eat." But he said to them, "I have food to eat of which you do not know." So the disciples said to one another, "Could someone have brought him something to eat?" Jesus said to them, "My food is to do the will of the one who sent me and to finish his work. Do you not say, 'In four months the harvest will be here'? I tell you, look up and see the fields ripe for the harvest. The reaper is already receiving his payment and gathering crops for eternal life, so that the sower and reaper can rejoice together. For here, the saying is verified that 'One sows and another reaps.' I sent you to reap what you have not worked for; others have done the work, and you are sharing the fruits of their work."

Many of the Samaritans of that town began to believe in him because of the word of the woman who testified, "He told me everything I have done." When the Samaritans came to him, they invited him to stay with them; and he stayed there two days. Many more began to believe in him because of his word, and they said to the woman, "We no longer believe because of your word; for we have heard for ourselves, and we know that this is truly the savior of the world."

Background:

Scripture scholars doubt that this encounter actually took place. There is no evidence in the other three gospels that Jesus ever traveled into Samaria. In the gospel of Matthew, when Jesus is sending out the apostles he forbids them to venture into pagan or Samaritan regions. “Jesus sent out these twelve after instructing them thus, ‘Do not go into pagan territory or enter a Samaritan town. Go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. (Matthew 10:5-6)’” But in The Acts of the Apostles we find that after the stoning of Steven, Philip went to Samaria to proclaim Jesus as the Messiah (Acts 8:5).

This gospel text itself turns on the images of water, faith, light, life and death. The Church has chosen this text to help those preparing for Baptism at the Easter Vigil to reflect on these elements of our faith. The gospel also helps the entire Christian community to reflect on our own faith journeys that led all of us to accept Baptism.

A key element in the story is the breaking of traditionally accepted norms of behavior. As the woman herself notes, Jesus should not have spoken to an unescorted woman and a Samaritan. However, she should not have been at the well in the middle of the day either. In a society that is strictly gender separated, women went to the well in the morning and evening, men went during the day. However, the other women of the town probably did not accept this woman because of her relations with men. In the initial interaction, it is Jesus who engages her by asking for a drink. He then repeatedly engages her in conversation about issues that men only discussed with other men. As their discussion unfolds, there are several places Jesus could have broken off their conversation, but he does not. Again, social norms are broken when the woman goes into town to tell others about her encounter with Jesus. The marketplace where the men of the community would have gathered was also gender separated. Her presence there would be another break with traditional norms of moral behavior of the day.

Why would Jesus behave in such a way that would cause scandal and jeopardize his credibility? John hints at the answer in Jesus’ response to the disciples. When the disciples return and find Jesus speaking with the woman. They wonder why he would be talking to her, but they do not ask. Instead, they invite him to eat something. He declines, telling them: "I have food to eat of which you do not know. My food is to do the will of the one who sent me and to finish his work." Jesus does not need their food because he draws a different kind of strength from doing the will of the Father.

Jesus stopped at this well with his disciples because he was thirsty from their journey and probably hungry as well. As the text unfolds, his human hunger and thirst led him into a hunger and thirst for the food and drink that is only satisfied by doing God’s will. The journey from human desire to God’s desire is unfolding in both Jesus and the woman.

As the catechumens prepare for their Baptism, they, too, are being invited to reflect on how human desire has led them to desire deeper things, the things of God. They are being invited to experience, in Jesus, the God who deeply desires to stop and encounter all who are thirsting. We who are baptized into the water of life have already discovered this reality. We now take on penance and sacrifices to again experience our human thirsting, which leads, once more, to the waters of Baptism and to the table of the Eucharist.

Reflection Questions:

1. Can you recall a time in your life when you were truly thirsty? Recall as much of the circumstances around that experience as you are able.
2. Have you had the experience of being hungry or thirsty when something comes to your attention and you forget about your hunger or thirst?
3. What are some of the things which you could say you thirst for today?
4. What are some of things people around you thirst for?
5. If you extended that image into the world or even the earth itself, what are the things for which they thirst?
6. Later, as John tells of the events of the passion, he will say: “...aware that everything was now finished, in order that the scripture might be fulfilled, Jesus said, "I thirst." (John 19: 28) How do you hear that statement in light of this text?
7. Can you consider that God thirsts? What is it that God thirsts for?

8. When the disciples return and offer Jesus something to eat, he responds, "I have food to eat of which you do not know." Have you had the experience of doing God's will in a way that left you with a sense of being full or rich in way that food, even a great banquet, does not?
9. Can you take some time to talk with God about the ways you experience being thirsty, the barriers you experience to responding to the thirst of another, or maybe the image of a God who thirsts?

The gospel background and reflection questions are written by Fr. Paul Gallagher, OFM. They are edited by Sister Anne Marie Lom, OSF and Joe Thiel. The excerpts from the Sunday readings are prepared by Joe Thiel. To be added to the distribution list, send your name and email address to annemarie.lom@gmail.com

Our Gospel Reflections are hosted by the Franciscan Sisters of Christian Charity. Their homepage is <https://fscs-calledtobe.org/>. One link there is labeled Franciscan Gospel Reflections. A click there will take you to the Gospel reflections for the upcoming Sunday. By following this link, you will be able to blog or comment on the reflection questions. The material will be posted on Fridays and will be available until the following Friday when the new material is posted.

Excerpts from the Lectionary for Mass for Use in the Dioceses of the United States of America, second typical edition © 2001, 1998, 1997, 1986, 1970 Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, Inc., Washington, DC. Used with permission. All rights reserved. No portion of this text may be reproduced by any means without permission in writing from the copyright owner.

Please include this information when printing or forwarding.

Excerpts from the readings for March 12, 2023, the Third Sunday of Lent

In their thirst, the people grumbled against Moses, saying, "Why did you ever make us leave Egypt? Was it just to have us die here of thirst with our children and our livestock?"

Moses cried out to the Lord, "What shall I do with this people? a little more and they will stone me!"

The Lord answered Moses, "Go in front of the people, with some of the elders of Israel, holding in your hand the staff with which you struck the river. I will be there in front of you, on the rock in Horeb. Strike the rock, and the water will flow from it for the people to drink."

This Moses did, in the presence of the elders of Israel. The place was called Massah and Meribah, because the Israelites quarreled there and tested the Lord, saying, "Is the Lord in our midst or not?"

If today you hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

Come, let us sing joyfully to the Lord; let us acclaim the Rock of our salvation.

Let us come into his presence with thanksgiving; let us bow down in worship; let us kneel before the Lord who made us. He is our God, and we are the flock he guides.

Oh, that today you would hear his voice: "Harden not your hearts as at Meribah, as in the day of Massah in the desert, where your fathers tested me though they had seen my works."

Brothers and sisters: Since we have been justified by faith, we have peace with God through Christ; we have gained access to this grace in which we stand, and we boast in hope of the glory of God.

And hope does not disappoint, because the love of God has been poured into our hearts through the Holy Spirit. Christ, while we were still helpless, died at the appointed time for the ungodly.

Only with difficulty does one die for a just person, though perhaps for a good person one might find courage to die. But God proves his love for us in that while we were still sinners Christ died for us.

Jesus came to a town of Samaria; Jacob's well was there. A woman came to draw water. Jesus said, "Give me a drink." The Samaritan said, "How can you, a Jew, ask me, a Samaritan woman, for a drink?" —For Jews use nothing in common with Samaritans. — Jesus said, "If you knew the gift of God and who is saying, 'Give me a drink, ' you would ask him and he would give you living water." The woman said, "Where can you get this water? Are you greater than Jacob, who gave us this well?" Jesus said, "Who drinks this water will thirst again; whoever drinks the water I shall give will never thirst; the water I shall give will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life. "The hour is coming when true worshipers will worship the Father in Spirit and truth." The woman said, "I know that the Messiah is coming, the one called the Christ; when he comes, he will tell us everything." Jesus said to her, "I am he, the one speaking with you." The woman went into the town and said, "Come see a man who told me everything I have done. Could he be the Christ?" They went out of the town and came to him. Meanwhile, the disciples urged him, "Rabbi, eat." But he said, "I have food to eat of which you do not know. "My food is to do the will of the one who sent me and to finish his work. I sent you to reap what you have not worked for; others have done the work, and you are sharing the fruits of their work." Many of the Samaritans of that town began to believe in him; and he stayed there two days. Many more began to believe in him because of his word.

Excerpts from Exodus 17:3-7; Psalm 95:1-2, 6-9; Romans 5:1-2, 5-8; and John 4:5-42

Friends,

Here are the gospel background and reflection questions for March 12th, the Third Sunday of Lent, as prepared by Franciscan spiritual director Fr. Paul Gallagher. In the gospel from John, Jesus suggests to a Samaritan woman at Jacob's well that he could provide her with living water. She asks Jesus, "Are you greater than our father Jacob, who gave us this cistern and drank from it himself?" Jesus answers her, "Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again; but whoever drinks the water I shall give will never thirst; the water I shall give will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life."

The other readings also have references to people thirsting, and testing the Lord about it, and the alternative life-giving water. In the first reading, from Exodus, the people grumble against Moses at Massah and Meribah, saying, "Why did you ever make us leave Egypt? Was it just to have us die here of thirst?" Psalm 95 years, "Oh, that today you would hear his voice: 'Harden not your hearts as at Meribah, as in the day of Massah in the desert, where your fathers tested me though they had seen my works.'" The second reading is from the letter to the Romans, where Paul writes, "The love of God has been poured out into our hearts through the Holy Spirit who has been given to us. God proves his love for us in that while we were still sinners Christ died for us." On each of the next three Sundays, the Third, Fourth and Fifth Sundays of Lent, we have long gospel readings like this one, from the gospel of John, from chapters 4, 9, and 11. These relate the stories of the Samaritan woman at the well, the man born blind, and the raising of Lazarus. After this we will come to Palm/Passion Sunday, and then the Easter Triduum. In the gospel for this week, the Samaritan woman says to Jesus, "Give me this water, so that I may not be thirsty." For us, here and now is our Lenten opportunity to know the gift of God and to drink from this living water. Jesus replies to the woman, and to us, "The hour is coming, and is now here, when true worshipers will worship the Father in Spirit and truth; and indeed the Father seeks such people to worship him. God is Spirit, and those who worship him must worship in Spirit and truth."