4th Sunday of Advent
Luke 1:26-38

The angel Gabriel was sent from God to a town of Galilee called Nazareth, to a virgin betrothed to a man named Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary. And coming to her, he said, "Hail, favored one! The Lord is with you." But she was greatly troubled at what was said and pondered what sort of greeting this might be.

Then the angel said to her, "Do not be afraid, Mary, for you have found favor with God. Behold, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall name him Jesus. He will be great and will be called Son of the Most High, and the Lord God will give him the throne of David his father, and he will rule over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there will be no end."

But Mary said to the angel, "How can this be, since I have no relations with a man?" And the angel said to her in reply, "The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you. Therefore, the child to be born will be called holy, the Son of God. And behold, Elizabeth, your relative, has also conceived a son in her old age, and this is the sixth month for her who was called barren; for nothing will be impossible for God."

Mary said, "Behold, I am the handmaid of the Lord. May it be done to me according to your word." Then the angel departed from her.

Background:

Luke's community would have heard this text from a different perspective than that of most contemporary readers. People of that day believed that any man and woman left alone would eventually become sexually involved. Therefore, they believed that there was a constant need to protect a woman from being alone with men. Living spaces and the rituals of daily living were designed to protect and provide constant chaperones. It was especially the responsibility of the male family members to protect the women of their household.

Mary is also "betrothed to Joseph." Being betrothed was a much more serious commitment than the contemporary notion of being engaged. Typically, the women of both families would have met to negotiate and determine whether the two were suitable partners. Both families had to be reassured that this was a good arrangement for all, and that neither was taking advantage of the other family. Once the women had agreed, the patriarchs confirmed the decision. The betrothal was a public acceptance of the proposed marriage agreement. While the couple did not yet live together, they and their families had entered a public covenant to be husband and wife. Before the bride moved from the house of her father to the house of the groom, she was expected to produce evidence of her virginity. If she could not, public shame was brought to both families.

When Luke's community heard this text, they would have immediately been aware that Gabriel, a male spirit, was present to Mary without supervision. This was a potentially dangerous situation. However, the honorable Gabriel first recognized Mary as a person of honor before God, and then moved to ease her fear. He addressed her, "Hail, favored one! The Lord is with you" (verse 29). The term "hail" carries the connotation that one should rejoice. Although Gabriel tried to reassure Mary that his presence was a sign of "favor with God," it also meant that she was being asked to surrender her life to God's service. Noah, Moses, Gideon and Samuel all had "found favor" with God. (Genesis 6:8, Exodus 33:12, Judges 6:17 and 1 Samuel 2:26.) Gabriel continued to try to reassure Mary that what was requested was God's will for her. She was to understand that God is capable of doing what was being suggested. Mary was still greatly concerned. "How can this be...?"

The text suggests that Mary's concerns might have been larger than this single issue. Gabriel suggested that the Holy Spirit would come upon her and overshadow her. Luke's community would recall the cloud that overshadowed the tent when God spoke to Moses. They further understood this to mean that God would play the role of a traditional husband for Mary. He would “empower” her and “protect” her, two duties of a Middle Eastern husband. Mary’s words of acceptance, “Let it be done to me according to your word,” (Luke 1:38b) were a typical response when one conceded an argument. They may be translated “as you wish.” God had chosen to interact with Mary directly, bypassing the traditions where the parents had roles in the arbitration and protection of their daughter’s life and future. Gabriel departed, but Luke does not give any indication that Mary was at peace. In the next verses of Luke’s gospel, Mary goes off to visit her cousin Elizabeth. (Luke 1:39-56)

Reflection Questions:

1. Gabriel is described as being sent by God in the first words of the text. What is that saying about Gabriel’s mission?
2. Mary is described as being greatly troubled by Gabriel’s presence and message. Have there been occasions when you might have been described as greatly troubled? What was happening in your life? How did that impact your own relationship with God?
3. Who are some of the people in the bible or in the church who might be called “highly favored?” What are some of the things that strike you about this group?
4. What was it that Mary gave to God by consenting to God’s desire for her?
5. What values and attitudes did Mary have to embrace in order to say yes to God?
6. The last line of the text says simply that the angel Gabriel departed. What was Mary left to deal with in his absence?
7. Can you take some time to talk with God about whatever it is that has left you feeling “greatly troubled,” or perhaps the feelings you have about being left to deal with some difficult situations in your own life? Or could you talk with God asking for the virtues Mary had in order to say yes to God?

Excerpts from the Readings for December 20, 2020, the Fourth Sunday of Advent

When King David was settled in his palace, he said to Nathan the prophet,
"Here I am living in a house of cedar, while the ark of God dwells in a tent!"
Nathan answered the king, "Go, do whatever you have in mind, for the Lord is with you." But that night the Lord spoke to Nathan and said:
"Go, tell my servant David, 'Thus says the Lord: Should you build me a house to dwell in?'
"It was I who took you from the care of the flock to be commander of my people Israel.
I have been with you, I have destroyed all your enemies. I will make you famous like the great ones.

I will fix a place for my people Israel; so that they may dwell in their place without further disturbance. Neither shall the wicked afflict them. I will give you rest from all your enemies. The Lord will establish a house for you. And when your time comes, I will raise up your heir after you, and I will make his kingdom firm. I will be a father to him, and he shall be a son to me. Your house and your kingdom shall endure forever before me; your throne shall stand firm forever."

For ever I will sing the goodness of the Lord. The promises of the Lord I will sing through all generations. For you have said, "My kindness is established forever"; in heaven you have confirmed your faithfulness. "I have made a covenant with my chosen one, I have sworn to David my servant: Forever will I confirm your posterity and establish your throne for all generations." "He shall say of me, 'You are my father, my God, the Rock, my savior.' Forever I will maintain my kindness toward him, and my covenant with him stands firm."

Brothers and sisters: To him who can strengthen you, according to the proclamation of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery kept secret for long ages but now manifested through the prophetic writings, and made known to all nations to bring about the obedience of faith, to the only wise God, through Jesus Christ be glory forever and ever. Amen.

From Joe Thiel:

Friends,

Here are some connections to be found through the readings for December 20th, the Fourth Sunday of Advent. The gospel from Luke tells the story of the Annunciation, the angel Gabriel's visit to Mary at Nazareth. He tells her she will conceive and bear a son, by the working of the Holy Spirit. "He will be great; called the Son of the Most High. The Lord God will give him the throne of David his father, and he will rule over the house of Jacob forever. Of his kingdom there will be no end." The other three readings make connections to Jesus as this soon-to-be newborn king in the line of David, and to God's promise to David about his kingdom. In the first reading from 2 Samuel, the Lord instructs the prophet Nathan to tell David, "I will fix a place for my people Israel, and establish a house for you. I will raise up your heir and make his kingdom firm, and he shall be a son to me. Your kingdom shall endure forever." Psalm 89 declares, "I have made a covenant and sworn to David, I will confirm your posterity, and establish your throne for all generations." In the second reading, Paul writes to the Romans, "To him be glory forever, who, according to the revelation of the mystery kept secret for long ages, is now manifested through the prophetic writings and the command of God."
